MY CAREER IN NORTH DEVON

I studied Biology, Physics, History and IT in Dorset and I subsequently spent three years studying at Plymouth University for my BSc (Hons) in Marine Biology and Coastal Ecology. After this, I worked as a Laboratory Technician for an NHS licensed BioVault for stem cell storage.

I learnt of Pall Corporation by using some of their products and I was surprised to find they had a manufacturing site in Ilfracombe, so I applied for a job and have loved my time here since. I started as a Quality Compliance Officer and then took the role of Quality Assurance Manager. There are lots of manufacturers and technical companies in North Devon, so the ability to develop your career is here.

Pall is a fast-paced growing company with the biggest spectrum of filtration products in the world. The site in Ilfracombe is going from strength to strength and currently produces filters within the Biopharm, Food & Beverage, Microelectronics, Medical Device and Industrial ranges.

My role involves leading the teams to oversee production and assess the system through auditing, investigations and data analysis. I ensure only the correctly manufactured product leaves the site and that we protect our customers by supplying the quality product that they expect.
